

Graylock Digital — Realtor Landing Page Conversion Redesign Scope

Page: /websites-for-realtors

Audience: Individual real-estate agents, agent teams, and small brokerages evaluating a new marketing website, buyer search capability, seller capture, and MLS/IDX guidance.

Primary conversion goal: Start a qualified 15-minute Realtor Website + IDX Fit Call.

Build directive: Improve the existing page; do not create a second landing page.

Core positioning: Graylock does not sell a prettier homepage. Graylock builds an owned, custom real-estate website that helps buyers search, sellers raise their hands, and the next conversation start more easily.

1. Executive Decision

The current Realtor page has the right raw material: it is specific to agents, responsibly describes IDX/MLS uncertainty, uses a low-risk custom-demo offer, and already uses the Willow Realty project as relevant proof. ¹ The issue is not missing content. It is that the strongest proof and most valuable practical outcome are scattered across a long page.

The page should become more concrete, more visually sectional, and easier to follow—using the well-driller page as the visual benchmark. The well-driller page earns attention through dark, image-backed bands, restrained copy, rugged premium photography, handwritten orange emphasis lines, and a clear progression from problem to proof to process. ² The Realtor page should adopt that visual rhythm without adopting the well-driller page’s market-exclusivity framing or blue-collar language.

The third-party plan is correct that Graylock should clarify the difference between a standard custom marketing site and an IDX-enabled implementation, make buyer and seller journeys explicit, compress the public IDX process, and turn Willow into a substantive product proof module. ³ However, do not publish unapproved package prices, unverified results, fake testimonials, or “lead engine” claims that imply guaranteed performance.

2. Recommendation Triage

Recommendation	Decision	Required treatment
Reframe the hero around buyer and seller conversations	Implement	Lead with the outcome and name the key experiences:

		buyer search when eligible, seller capture, local-market authority, and clear contact paths.
Rename the CTA and call	Implement	Replace generic “Book a Realtor Website Call” with Get Your Realtor Website + IDX Plan . The booking experience becomes a 15-Minute Realtor Website + IDX Fit Call .
Move general design statistics lower	Implement	Remove the 50 ms / 75% / 94% statistic block from high in the page. Do not make it a primary sales argument.
Turn Willow into a mini case study	Implement	Use feature proof, real project scope, and links to approved live experiences. Do not invent outcomes or quote a client without approval.
Make buyer and seller journeys explicit	Implement	Add a two-path visual section with distinct search and seller-conversation flows.
Replace five-step IDX process with three stages	Implement	Keep the main flow simple; retain qualification language and detailed questions in FAQ content.
Add a package-includes section before pricing	Implement	Separate “included with the managed website” from “confirmed after market review.”
Add an Elm Street / IDX Broker proof strip	Implement	Use concise, factual language: developer-partner status, MLS-aware setup guidance, and approval timing depends on local requirements.
Add a mobile sticky CTA	Implement	One action only: Get Your Realtor Website + IDX Plan .

Publish “typical managed IDX packages begin at $799/month”	Defer	Do not publish until Graylock confirms a real, repeatable commercial policy that matches sales, invoicing, and provider fees.
Anchor the page at $199/month by itself	Remove	The existing live price page supports $199, $299, $449, and custom plans, but an IDX-enabled project may need a different scope and provider fees. 4 The Realtor page must not make $199 the dominant expectation for a complex IDX project.
Call the offering a “managed lead engine” everywhere	Adapt	Use this idea sparingly as an outcome description. Prefer concrete wording such as “custom real-estate website with buyer search when eligible and seller lead capture.”
Add metrics, conversion claims, or client testimonials now	Defer	Use feature proof until Graylock has approved evidence, a defined measurement period, and permission to publish.

3. New Visual System: Borrow the Well-Driller Page’s Strengths

The Realtor page should not become another light, generic luxury-real-estate template. Keep Graylock’s dark charcoal, black, and orange design language, but shift the photography from rugged field work to high-end local-market and product-use imagery: premium homes at dusk, a client reviewing listings on a tablet, a local neighborhood street, a seller consultation, and close crops of useful property-search interfaces.

Use the same handwritten orange accent font already used on the well-driller page only once per major visual band. It should work as a memorable conclusion or assertion, not as a decorative second headline.

Handwritten accent options: KEEP THE SEARCH. OWN THE CONVERSATION.BUYERS SEARCH.
SELLERS COMPARE. BE READY FOR BOTH.A BETTER WEBSITE MAKES THE NEXT STEP EASY.

Use full-bleed photography with a `rgba(0,0,0,0.62-0.76)` overlay only where white copy sits on top. Never use an image so busy that copy needs an opaque box to become readable. The visual layout must match the well-driller page's contrast and depth while remaining appropriate for a premium real-estate audience.

4. Required New Page Architecture

Build the page in this order. Remove or merge any current sections that duplicate the same explanation.

Order	Section	Job in the sales journey	Background / visual direction
1	Hero	Clarify the product and earn the fit call	Existing Willow device asset upgraded into a readable product montage.
2	Trust strip	Lower risk immediately	Matte black; no large image.
3	Willow proof module	Prove Graylock has built the relevant product surfaces	Full-width dark photography + product screenshots.
4	Buyer and seller paths	Show that the website solves two distinct revenue conversations	Split visual band; one buyer visual and one seller visual.
5	What is included	Make the managed scope tangible before pricing	Clean dark background with premium iconography.
6	Three-stage MLS / IDX path	Reduce perceived complexity	Image-backed section with a subtle dark mask.
7	Why Graylock	Contrast against templates without repeating all prior copy	Compact comparison; no oversized table.
8	Investment and guarantee	Set the correct category expectation	Dark, minimal, scannable.

		and prevent price surprise
9	FAQ	Resolve eligibility, timing, ownership, and seller-lead objections	Existing accordion pattern, tightened.
10	Final CTA	Explain the precise next step and convert	Full-bleed premium-home or agent/client visual with dark mask.

5. Section-by-Section Build and Copy Specification

Section 1 — Hero: Outcome + Product Category

Purpose

Make it clear within one screen that Graylock builds more than a polished agent homepage. The visitor should understand that the next call clarifies their custom site direction, buyer/seller conversion plan, and IDX/MLS path.

Remove from the existing hero

Remove the current generic body copy and replace the generic CTA wording. Correct all headline spacing so no sentence runs together. Do not display more than four hero proof items.

TURN LOCAL PROPERTY SEARCHES INTO BUYER + SELLER CONVERSATIONS.

Set BUYER + SELLER CONVERSATIONS. in Graylock orange.

Body

We build custom real-estate websites that make your local expertise easy to trust, give buyers a branded search experience when eligible, and give sellers a clear reason to start the conversation with you.

Primary CTA

GET YOUR REALTOR WEBSITE + IDX PLAN

Secondary text link

SEE WHAT A BETTER SEARCH EXPERIENCE LOOKS LIKE ↓

Link the secondary action to the Willow proof module. Do not give it the same visual weight as the primary CTA.

Reassurance line

Free custom homepage direction. We confirm your MLS path and exact scope before you commit.

Hero proof items

Use four short, icon-supported proof items under the CTA:

1. Custom brand + local-market pages
2. IDX search when eligible
3. Seller valuation + contact capture
4. MLS-aware setup + ongoing support

Hero visual direction

Keep the existing Willow device asset as a base, but rebuild the right side into a product montage, not simply a laptop/phone mockup. The desktop device must show a branded property-search result or property-detail page. Add two small, non-interactive supporting crops behind or beside the device:

- A listing-detail visual with gallery, property facts, attribution area, and inquiry CTA.
- A seller-valuation visual with a short address/timing/contact form.

Do not render small illegible text as an image. Use recognizable interface structures and clear, minimal labels only. On mobile, show the primary device first, then the two supporting feature panels in a horizontal swipe or stacked sequence.

Section 2 — Immediate Trust Strip

Purpose

Answer four important “can I trust this process?” questions before the prospect must scroll through the proof modules.

BUILT FOR WILLOW REALTY GROUP

H2

A REAL-ESTATE WEBSITE THAT KEEPS THE NEXT STEP ON YOUR BRAND.

Body

Willow Realty Group needed more than a polished homepage. Graylock built a custom Southern Idaho experience with branded property search, property-detail pages, seller valuation capture, team content, and direct inquiry paths designed to move visitors toward a real conversation.

Feature chips or mini cards

Feature	Supporting copy
Buyer Search	Keep property exploration on your own branded experience when IDX eligibility allows.
Property Detail	Give high-intent visitors an easy way to ask a question while they are looking at a home.
Seller Valuation	Capture address, timing, and context before the listing conversation starts.
Local-Market Pages	Show clients why you know their neighborhood—not just how to search it.

Primary link / CTA

EXPLORE THE WILLOW EXPERIENCE

Only link to the live project if Willow has approved the public link. If not approved, replace with an on-page lightbox or controlled preview.

Handwritten orange line beneath the module

KEEP THE SEARCH. OWN THE CONVERSATION.

Visual direction

Use a full-width band containing a premium darkened local-market or modern-home photograph in the background. Overlay an actual, large Willow page visual on the right, with the four product feature chips arranged on the left. On mobile, stack copy, then the feature panel, then the device/screenshot visual. No fake performance metrics or invented client quote.

Section 4 — Two Paths, One Website

Purpose

Make the broader revenue value of the website obvious. Property search alone feels buyer-only; the page needs to prove that seller capture is part of the strategic value.

Intro

Your website should make both journeys feel simple, local, and unmistakably connected to your brand.

Buyer card

FOR BUYERSSearch homes. Explore listing details. Send a property inquiry. Schedule a conversation.Outcome: A buyer conversation with property context—not a random contact form submission.

Seller card

FOR SELLERSRequest a valuation. Share an address and timing. See local proof. Book a listing conversation.Outcome: A seller lead with context—not just a bare email address.

Handwritten orange divider line

BUYERS SEARCH. SELLERS COMPARE. BE READY FOR BOTH.

Visual direction

Use a dark two-panel band. The buyer side uses a premium property-search/listing-detail visual or a client reviewing homes on a phone. The seller side uses a refined local-home image paired with a valuation-form crop or a seller consultation scene. Apply the same dark mask style used on the well-driller goals background. Use imagery as atmosphere, not as a replacement for the words.

Section 5 — What Your Realtor Website Package Includes

Purpose

Clarify the real scope before the visitor sees pricing. This is the key fix for the current $199-anchor problem.

Exact copy

WHAT YOUR REALTOR WEBSITE PACKAGE INCLUDES.

Intro

Your plan is not just hosting. It is a custom, maintained real-estate website built to support local visibility, buyer and seller conversations, and a clear next step for every visitor.

Left column: Included with the managed website

- Custom branded website and mobile-first design
- Local SEO foundation and market/service-area content structure
- Buyer and seller conversion paths
- Property inquiry, valuation, consultation, and contact forms
- Hosting, SSL, backups, maintenance, support, and reporting
- Defined website update allowance and refresh benefit while subscribed
- Standard IDX presentation when eligibility and scope allow

Right column: Confirmed after market review

- Local MLS and brokerage eligibility
- IDX provider path and available data fields
- MLS/provider setup, approval requirements, and third-party costs
- Additional MLS coverage or complex search requirements
- CRM, SMS, email, or advanced lead-routing integrations
- Bespoke map, portal, paid-media, or expanded SEO work

Required clarification line

IDX availability, approval requirements, disclosures, and third-party fees vary by MLS, brokerage, provider, and market. We confirm your path and provide an exact scope before you commit.

Build rules

Use two clean cards with an orange line heading and white check icons. Do not use dense checklists with 20+ items. On mobile, stack “Included” first, then “Confirmed after market review.”

Section 6 — MLS / IDX, Made Simpler

Purpose

Preserve transparency without asking the prospect to learn a five-step technical process before they understand the benefit.

ELM STREET IDX BROKER + MLS GUIDANCE

H2

THE MLS PROCESS SHOULD NOT HOLD UP YOUR WEBSITE.

Intro

You stay in control of your MLS relationship. Graylock manages the website work, guides the technical path, and helps keep approval steps moving without making you figure out the website side alone.

Stage 1

01 — PLAN YOUR MARKET + LEAD FLOWWe learn your market, brokerage, MLS, current site, and the buyer/seller experience you want. Then we recommend the site structure, IDX approach, and scope.

Stage 2

02 — CONFIRM ELIGIBILITY WHILE WE BUILDYou complete only the market-specific brokerage or MLS items that require your involvement. Graylock builds the custom site, prepares the search and capture paths, and keeps the project moving.

Stage 3

03 — TEST, LAUNCH + SUPPORTWhen the required approvals and technical requirements are ready, we test the search experience and disclosures, launch on your domain, and maintain the website after launch.

Qualification line

Website build: typically 7–10 business days after direction and content are ready. MLS, brokerage, provider, and data-approval timing varies by market and remains outside Graylock's control.

Visual direction

Use a full-width background image of an agent reviewing property listings, a high-end home interior, or a local neighborhood at dusk with a 68–74% black mask. Three numbered cards float over the image; they should feel lighter and easier to scan than the existing five-step cards. Put detailed approval language only in the FAQ.

Section 7 — Why Graylock Instead of the Typical Template

Purpose

Keep the existing comparison logic but reduce repetition. The comparison belongs after the prospect understands the product, proof, and process—not before.

Exact copy

H2

A REAL-ESTATE WEBSITE SHOULD NOT LOOK LIKE EVERYONE ELSE’ S.

Traditional template column

- Starts with a shared theme and rigid page structure
- Makes property search an afterthought or a separate mystery
- Gives buyers and sellers generic paths
- Requires you to sort out future updates alone

Graylock column

- Starts with a custom direction built around your market and brand
- Plans IDX/MLS readiness early when it is part of your scope
- Creates distinct paths for search, valuation, consultation, and contact
- Keeps the site maintained, supported, and refreshed while subscribed

Closing line

YOU SHOULD NOT HAVE TO LOOK LIKE EVERY OTHER AGENT TO GET TAKEN SERIOUSLY.

Use the handwritten orange type for the closing line.

Build rules

Keep the existing “vs.” concept but shorten the columns to four bullets each. No duplicated “custom demo before you pay” language here; that promise has already been established.

Section 8 — Investment, Scope, and Guarantee

Purpose

Set the right expectation without creating a false price promise for IDX work.

Exact copy

CLEAR SCOPE. NO SURPRISES.

H2

THE RIGHT WEBSITE DEPENDS ON YOUR MARKET, MLS PATH, AND GOALS.

Body

Standard custom Graylock websites begin at the published monthly plan rates. IDX-enabled Realtor sites are scoped after a quick market and eligibility review so you know the website, integration, and any applicable third-party costs before you commit.

Pricing rules

Do not put “from $199/month” by itself on this page. The live pricing page lists Starter at $199/month, Growth at $299/month, Scale at $449/month, and Custom at a custom quote.

4 Realtor / IDX needs may fit different tiers and may require separate provider costs; therefore this page must link to the full pricing page and state the category clearly rather than imply that a complete IDX solution is $199/month.

Do not publish a $799 IDX price, “typical managed IDX package” price, or all-in IDX quote until it is an approved Graylock policy and the provider / pass-through treatment is formally defined.

Section 9 — FAQs

Keep the existing realtor-specific FAQ set, but reorder it to match the actual purchase concerns:

1. Do you build real-estate websites with IDX property search?
2. Will you help with MLS approval?
3. Can you work with my existing IDX provider?
4. Can the website help generate seller leads too?
5. How long does a real-estate website take to build?
6. What does the MLS setup process usually involve?
7. Do I own my website and domain?

Remove duplicate generic questions once the inclusions and simple process sections are live. The answers must continue to avoid promising rankings, approval, lead volumes, or provider eligibility.

Reassurance

Visual direction

Use a full-width premium local-market home or agent-and-client consultation image with a black overlay. Keep the copy block left-aligned on desktop. Do not reuse the Willow device mockup again; the page already used it as functional proof.

6. Form, CTA, and Tracking Requirements

CTA rules

All primary Realtor-page CTAs use exactly:

GET YOUR REALTOR WEBSITE + IDX PLAN

Each CTA routes to:

`/get-started?industry=real-estate&intent=realtor_idx_fit&utm_source=realtor_landing&utm_medium=site_cta&utm_content=[placement]`

Use the following `utm_content` values: `hero`, `willow_case_study`, `package_scope`, `investment`, and `final_cta`.

The booking page title must read:

15-Minute Realtor Website + IDX Fit Call

The short supporting line must read:

We will review your market, MLS path, current website, team structure, buyer/seller goals, and the right scope before you commit.

Required form fields

Use short, high-signal fields only:

Field	Requirement
Name	Required
Email	Required; format validation

Phone	Required; phone validation
Role	Required select: Agent, Team Lead, Brokerage Owner, Other
Market / service area	Required
Brokerage	Optional
MLS, if known	Optional
Current website URL	Optional URL validation
Do you need property search?	Required select: Yes, No, Not sure yet
Target launch timing	Required select
Anything you want the new site to do better?	Optional text; 500-character limit

Do not ask for a budget field on the first conversion form. Price scope is a live conversation and the page has already set an honest expectation that IDX work is scoped after market review.

Analytics events

Implement the following events with the visible placement and current UTM parameters:

- `realtor_hero_cta_click`
- `realtor_willow_case_study_open`
- `realtor_buyer_path_view`
- `realtor_seller_path_view`
- `realtor_idx_process_view`
- `realtor_package_scope_view`
- `realtor_pricing_view`
- `realtor_faq_expand`
- `realtor_fit_call_start`
- `realtor_fit_call_complete`

Track `role` , `need_property_search` , `market` , and `utm_*` values only after ensuring the existing privacy policy and analytics configuration allow it.

7. Responsive, Accessibility, and Visual QA Requirements

The third-party review raised a real concern that certain sections may render too low-contrast or animation-dependent. 3 Treat this as a launch blocker.

Requirement	Desktop	Mobile
Text contrast	All copy must remain legible over photos with the image overlay active.	Do not lower overlay opacity simply to reveal more imagery. Readability wins.
Motion	No essential content may be hidden until an animation completes.	Disable decorative motion for reduced-motion users.
Hero	Copy left; product montage right; CTA visible without scrolling.	Copy first; hero product visual below; proof items in a two-by-two grid.
Buyer / seller section	Two equal panels.	Stack buyer first, then seller; retain clear headings.
MLS process	Three horizontal stages.	Stack 01 → 02 → 03; no horizontal overflow.
CTA	Header CTA remains visible.	Add one sticky bottom CTA: GET YOUR REALTOR WEBSITE + IDX PLAN.
Device visuals	Preserve screenshot detail; do not crop the core search/valuation feature.	Use carousel or vertical stacked cards; never shrink UI below readable scale.

Test every section in initial page-load, fully scrolled, reduced-motion, desktop, tablet, and mobile states. Correct the existing hero punctuation/spacing issue: Searching. Make , not Searching.Make . 3

Custom IDX Real Estate Websites for Agents & Teams | Graylock Digital

Meta description

Graylock builds custom real-estate websites for agents and teams with buyer search when eligible, seller lead capture, local-market pages, MLS guidance, and ongoing support. Get a free custom website + IDX plan.

Turn Local Property Searches Into Buyer + Seller Conversations.

Canonical

<https://graylockdigital.com/websites-for-realtors>

Schema requirements

Use `WebPage` and `Service` schema for Graylock's service offering. Do not mark Graylock as the real-estate broker or imply that Graylock operates an MLS. Only add `FAQPage` schema for questions and answers visibly present on the page. Add `Review` or testimonial schema only after Graylock has a genuine approved testimonial with correct attribution.

9. Implementation Sequence

Priority	Work	Definition of done
P0	Fix hero spacing/punctuation, contrast, and animation visibility; replace generic CTA language; remove isolated $199 anchor	Hero immediately communicates the Realtor-specific product and one next step.
P0	Add the four-item trust strip and mobile sticky CTA	Trust and conversion path remain visible on desktop and mobile.
P1	Build Willow product-proof module and buyer/seller split	Functional proof appears before lengthy IDX process explanation.
P1	Replace five-step IDX flow with the three-stage flow; add package-includes section	The complexity and price/scope story are understandable without a sales call.
P1	Restyle the visual page rhythm to match the well-driller page	Use image-backed bands, restrained dark overlays, orange handwritten emphasis, and reduced white-paper density.

P2	Tighten comparison, FAQ, metadata, tracking, and QA	No duplicate messaging, hidden content, or unsupported claims.

Assumptions Requiring Graylock Confirmation

1. Willow permission: Confirm whether the live Willow Realty site, screenshots, and feature links may be used publicly on this page.
2. Elm Street brand use: Confirm whether the Elm Street IDX Broker name and any logo usage are permitted in Graylock marketing materials. Use text only until verified.
3. Commercial policy: Confirm the exact Realtor / IDX product scope and pricing before publishing a Realtor-specific monthly starting amount or any provider-cost statement beyond “confirmed after market review.”
4. Guarantee eligibility: Confirm that the 30-day money-back guarantee can be accurately presented for the relevant Realtor package. Do not extend it to third-party provider, MLS, or pass-through fees unless the actual agreement does so.
5. Proof: Do not add numerical outcomes, performance claims, or testimonials until Graylock has permission and a clear basis for each claim.
